

A new, all-electric beginning

Electrifying buildings is key to reducing carbon emissions, improving air quality and advancing our commitment to equity and community. As part of our 2030 Zero Carbon Plan, we're ensuring that all communities are part of the transition to a clean energy future.

We were proud to partner with our community for the installation of heat pump-HVAC wall units and electric resistance water heating equipment in 155 tiny homes at the new Stockton Boulevard Safe Stay community shelter. This community partnership supports an important cause by helping build healthier, more resilient communities and empowering residents to be active participants in building a clean energy future.

Soon, this Sacramento shelter will house 175 people, offering them tiny homes and an opportunity to start a new chapter in their lives. Residents will also get comprehensive support through case management, behavioral health services, job placement and housing assistance.

It is Sacramento County's third – and largest to date – Safe Stay community shelter.

SMUD Board President Gregg Fishman, SMUD Board Vice President Dave Tamayo and Board Member Heidi Sanborn were thrilled to celebrate with City leaders and advocates at the recent ribbon cutting ceremony.

From energy-saving and clean energy tips to all-electric incentives, we're proud to serve our business community as your trusted energy partner.
