Watt's Cooking is an immersive, full-day culinary experience designed for local high school students (Grades 9-12). It combines hands-on learning and career exploration through a high-energy Farm-to-Fork cooking competition.

Student teams showcase their creativity, teamwork and skill using induction cooktops and standardized ingredients.

Event highlights include:

- Induction cooking and culinary trivia competitions
- Food & agriculture partner panel and resource fair
- Hands-on sustainability workshops and campus tours (registration required for tours)

Students will:

- Understand clean energy and sustainable cooking
- Learn about local food sustainability initiatives and culinary career development
- Discover culinary career pathways available after graduation
- Cheer on the teams in the cooking competition

This event supports our 2030 Zero Carbon Plan while preparing students for future careers in the culinary and hospitality industries.
